Danny dances around

BY ED LEPOMA

Hurricane Danny caused some minor flooding Friday in Hancock County, but emergency and law enforcement personnel reported a minimum of problems.

Civil Defense Director Bobby Boudin ordered the Civic Center at Longfellow Drive open, and Sheriff's Deputy Mark Breun said he opened the shelter at 6:30 a.m. Friday. By 9 a.m., American Red Cross volunteer Jake Jacob was on duty, but no one had checked in

At the new Civil Defense headquarters in the County Courthouse Annex, Boudin's staff was keeping track of the slow-moving storm and assistants were reporting areas where flooding had begun.

As expected, the pounding waves and surf made most of Lakeshore Road at Clermont Harbor inaccessible to average vehicles, but some people in larger, raised trucks were sightseeing, although barricades were up in place.

Boudin said at 10:30 a.m. Friday, the tide was at 4.1 feet at Bay Marina, only two feet above normal stage.

Water was also over North Beach Boulevard at Cedar Point, and there was flooding reported on Lagan, Tigress, Nassa and Central Avenue in Shoreline Park; on River Road and on Herron in Ansley.

The Sheriff's Department had a report of an 18-wheeler that had turned over on its side on Harbor Drive in the Bayou Phillips Community, and another request to rescue a cancer patient that was stranded on New Mexico Street in Shoreline Park.

DMR hears casino views

BY ED LEPOMA

The fate of a proposed casino development along South Beach Boulevard near Bayou Caddy is again in the hands of the Department of Marine Resources.

The DMR held a public hearing at Gulfview Elementary School Thursday night on a request to rezone an area of waterbottoms stretching from Sand Bayou to Lakeshore Drive, about six blocks from the now-closed Jubilation Ca-

About 55 people turned out for the hearing, with opposition mostly voiced by citizen and environmentalist groups which have been fighting the proposed development since one was first mentioned four years ago.

In 1995, landowner Jim Maness first got the area rezoned from "G-Residential and Recreational Use" to "C-Commercial Use". He is one of four property owners that control about 80 acres north of the beach road. They are now asking for an I-Industrial zoning of the waterbottoms area.

Maness successfully argued before the DMR that errors were made in the original Coastal Zone Management Plan drawn up in 1980, but the opposition filed a challenge in Hancock County Chancery Court.

In a ruling last November, Judge Thomas J. Teel overturned the rezoning designation of "C-Commercial," and ordered the DMR to conduct a new hearing on the petition.

Maness noted that supervisors, who adopted Hancock County's first ever Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance last January zoned the waterfront area C-Commercial.

"Every agency in the county that determines the public needs supports this proposal," said Maness.

Besides supervisors, Maness said he has sent DMR statements of support from Hancock Sheriff Ronnie Peterson; the County Planning Commission; the state legislative delegation; Education Supt. Terry Randolph; the county

Hope Haven

Last year in Hancock County over 100 children were given what most kids take for granted — a warm bed in a safe place surrounded by caring people.

The place was the Hope Haven Shelter, currently celebrating its one year anniversary and kicking off a membership

"We are not a half-way house," he said. "In our case, 95 percent of the children are there due to substantiated abuse and neglect."

Tennessee Gas making repairs

BY MARY G. SEILEY

The crippled Tennessee Gas Pipeline plant in Ansley is undergoing major restoration, with officials shooting for an Aug. 1 restart of some repaired engines.

Work crews will continue repairs and upgrades at the plant for three or four months afterwards, until operations resume entirely, said Gary O'Dom, the plant's area manager.

The work is progressing even as the company's internal investigation team wraps up a study of what caused a fiery explosion June 2 at the plant. While there were no injuries in the incident, Ansley area residents were jarred from their sleep and terrified by the thought of further explosions. And they were critical of safety officials' decision that area evacuation was unnecessary.

Officials attribute the explosion to failure of one or more bolts on an engine's compressor inside Building A at the plant. When sensors signaled regional pipeline officials that a gas leak was occurring, gas supplies were shutdown in the pipeline. However, a spark within the building—from a yet unknown source—ignited the gas and a major explosion occurred.

Elson Cody, a veteran state employee, has been appointed to replace Constance Taylor as Hancock County's probation officer.

Taylor had complained to Hancock County supervisors last February that she felt unsafe handlling parolees who come into her isolated offices on the second floor of the County Courthouse. She asked supervisors to find her office space somewhere else, but Youth Court Judge Ann Arras Williamson blocked plans to move Taylor to the Justice Facility on Court Street behind the courthouse. Williamson said the move would mean children and juveniles who came to the Youth Facility might come face-to-face with criminals who might have perpetrated a crime against Cody was in the office this week, and said he has had the cials since taking over the post. He has lived in Hancock County since 1981, and was helping Taylor when necessary. Cody started working for the counselor, the equivalent of a juvenile probation officer, and has been with the Department of Corrections since 1989. He said he felt comfortable in his present office space. "It's a matter of a 6-foot-2, 240 pound individual replacing a 5-foot-7, 125 pound person," said Cody. "I don't expect to have any problems." Taylor has been transferred to the Harrison County Probation Office in Biloxi, Cody said.

The Mayor and aldermen wrestled breifly with the problem at its July 8th meeting, but the consensus was that the problem has to be addressed by the state legislature.

On the agenda was a petition from the city's code enforcement office to declare three vacant properties "public menaces." the first in a lengthy process that is required before any de-

Aldermen voted to accept the low bid of Landmark Construction, Inc., at $32,564.40 for the relocation of water and sewerage lines serving two condominium developments in Henderson Point.

Mayor McDonald explained later that the city agreed years ago to run water and sewerage to the development, although it lies outside the city limits. The relocation is necessary to make way for state highway department plans to straighten out the dangerous curve in Hwy. 90 and construct a new bridg McDonald said the city owned a lot in the path of the new construction, and the cost MDOT paid for it "makes up a good portion of our cost for relocating the lines."

The Board rejected all bids to replace sewer mains on Fleitas Avenue, and will readvertise. New bids will be opened Aug.

Engineers estimated the cost at around $59,236, and three firms bid on the project, but McDonald said the lowest bid received was $81.129.

The Board also concurred in a Harrison County Board of Supervisors to pay its pro-rated share of a $2 million bond that will be floated to help pay the cost of a $5 million Advanced Education Center at USM's Gulf Coast Center.

The city's share would be $6,721 a year for 15 years, and McDonald said Pass Christian was the first city in the county to pledge its fair share.

He said the investment would "be well worth it" if the construction provides the catalyst for making USM's Gulf Coast facility a four-year college.

At the Board's recess meeting last Tuesday night, aldermen and the mayor agreed that bemonthly meetings will begin at 6 p.m., and the recess meeting later in the month will also begin at the same time

Damage to the building itself was substantial, although damage to the eight engines it houses was suprisingly minimal, O'Dom said Monday.

Repair work has consisted mostly of replacing damaged wiring to the engines, he said. Workers also are replacing the shell and roof on the building. and upgrading safety equipment, he added.

Every compressor bolt in the building is being replaced, O'Dom said, although such hardware has been inspected and replaced periodically over the plant's 40-year history.

He said more than one bolt broke during the incident, but it's not yet known whether the initial blast damaged the additional bolts.

Dozens of Ansley residents turned out last month for a public meeting on the incident, grilling O'Dom and area safety officials about the cause of the explosion, the response to it. and the possibility of more such accidents.

O'Dom said full inver of the incident is in progress by an internal team of specialists, including interviews with other natural gas companies which use similar bolts to those at the Ansley plant. He said the investigators are looking to find out if the same kinds of bolts have failed at other plants. That final report is expected to be completed in a couple of weeks, he

Meanwhile, Federal Department of Transportation officials who oversee gas pipeline operations were notified of the incident immediately after it occured, and were given a preli-minary report from the company within 30 days, O'Dom said DOT's Division of Pipeline Safety will review the company's final report and decide if further investigation is warranted, he added.

O'Dom said company officials are confident that the plant's internal safety sensors worked properly when the incident occured, signaling officials in Houston that a major problem had occured within the plant. An area official was dispatched to investigate, and gas to the system was shutoff.

Meanwhile, however, the explosion occured from a spark within the building, blasting a fireball through the building. One resident said he copied an the front gate of the plant, called to report the incident, and was told that company officials were unaware of it. O'Dom said safety officials were unaware of the magnitude of the incident, but knew that a major problem occured at the plant causing them to shut off the gas and dispatch an operator to the

The safety equipment that sent the distress signal to Houston, he said, performed perfectly. Still, new technology now offers more sophisticated equipment which will be installed in the plant as it is restored, he

There are no plans to staff the plant on a continuous basis, O'Dom said, because the plant, like most modern pipeline operations, is designed to operated un-manned. There will be workers at the plant for several months following the Aug.1 restart of four engines in Building A however. Crews will continue to work on the building's other four engines, and do additional construction and upgrades on the site.

O'Dom said the company hopes to hold a public meeting this year to educate area citizens on operations at the natural gas line plant - particularly homeowners who have moved into the Ansley area sioned in 1959. Emotional damage to residents shaken by the blast was far more significant that physical damage, he said, noting that only a handful of citizens filed property damage claims with the company's insurance

By the year 2000, which is just around the corner, Management of Mississippi's population will be 60 years did or more. By the year 2010, one in every four families in Mississippi will be caring for an older adult, either within the home or in a nursing facility

And look at these facts which the Department of Human Services has compiled.

* The majority of older Mississippians (52 percent) live in areas. * Almost 30 percent report that health problems interfere with their daily activities.

* Over 23 percent do not know who will care for them if they become sick or disabled for an extended period of time.

* About 17 percent said there have been times that they have not received medical attention when they thought they needed it. The primary reasons were cost, lack of insurance, and transportation.

It is estimated that 25 to 30 percent of all nursing home pabut their families have no other alternative available. The graying of Mississippi is

A team from the Mississippi Economic Council's 1997 Leadership Mississippi class looked at the problem and produced a two-segment documentary for the Mississippi ETV. Its purpose is to help Mississippians come face to face with the issue.

In doing the research it became immediately apparent that while the statistics are there — every agency from the Census Bureau to demographers at the Institutions for Higher Learning, are sounding the warning siren — it's a subject that is not yet on the front

Widows eligible for admission to state veterans homes

The State Veterans Affairs Board has expanded eligibility for admission to the State Veterans Homes to include widows veterans. Prior to this chan only veterans with active military duty and spouses of veterans residing in the veterans homes were eligible for admission to the homes.

Veterans who have active military duty pay a reduced charge of $41 per day for care in the veterans homes because the VA reimburses a portion of the cost of providing their care.

Veterans home residents who do not have active military duty must pay for the full cost of care, $82.

Residents of homes receive complete nursing home care, including room and board, medical care in the home, drugs and medications, necessary therapy, social activities, recreational activities and transportation to VA hospitals for medical treatment. Transportation to private medical appointments and private hospitals may be provided if resources are available.

VA HEALTHCARE ENROLLMENT

The Department of Veterans Affairs is establishing an annual patient enrollment system to manage the provision of VA health care services as required by Public Law 104-272, the Veterans Health Care Eligibility Reform Act of 1996.

This enrollment system is based on established priorities and requires that beginning Oct. 1, 1998, most veterans must be enrolled to receive VA health care.

The VA will begin phasing in enrollment starting Oct. 1, 1997. Contrary to earlier reports, there is no requirement for veterans to be enrolled by Oct. 1. VA will automatically enroll veterans who are receiving health care services.

While most veterans are required to be enrolled the VA will provide services to veterans whether they are enrolled or not they are in any of the following categories:

1. veterans seeking care for VA-rated service-connected conditions;

2. veterans with a 50 percent or more VA-rated serviceconnected condition seeking care for any condition:

3. veterans seeking care during their first year after separation from the military for compensable disabilities incurred aggravated in line of duty which have not been rated by

VA as service-connected. Veterans who receive VA health care services after Oct. 1, 1997, don't need to apply. Other veterans may apply by contacting the nearest VA health care facility. At Biloxi, the foll-free number is 1-800-296-8872. Or you may call VA's Health Eligibility Ce 1-800-949-8387. Center Veterans who are enrolled will be notified in writing by the VA's Health Eligibility Center.

Tiger will de mere then any other man in history to change the course of humanity.

We can fire you the father of Tiger Woods for heing lost in a father's moring love and hopes for his precious offspring. Earl Woods said what virtually any other father would have if his fabulous process, were equally fabulous progeny were equally so gifted and charismatic.

"Time" magazine put the Ti-ger on the centerfold spread in its April 21, 1997 issue whose cover featured "The Most Influential People in America 1997. Tiger had stellar company such as Rosie O'Donnell, John McCain and Madeleine Influential people, of course, are they who get others to follow their lead by dint of their accomplishments, styles, plucki-ness, drive to win, and dogged perseverance. People with little or nothing in common are still drawn to them.

"Words move; examples draw," is the centuries-old way of saying what this kind of influence really is. It is not about the influence one trace to by or pur lain for abady reasons. Rath loin for shady reasons. Rather it is influence which is there de spite our motives,

It is influence so compelling, so attractive and so commanding that it transcends origins, culture, race, ethnic ties, sex, wealth, poverty, health or con-dition in life. Yes, it even brings disparate religious together in

Being the highest form of flattery, imitation tells the story here, for the influentials have a flock of people of all de-scriptions and conditions vying to look, sound, feel and, most of all, to be like them.

Tiger Woods cross-cultural, multiracial, cross-sexual, even international impact on untold millions is apparently the prime example of a consummate influential. People who have nothing in common with him are drawn strongly to him. Part of the Tiger's attractive-ness is his boyish enthusiasm laced with deep parental respect and strong moral values. Adding to his mystique are his clinics for inner-city kids and

For the most part, that extent of dedication to youth sets the Tiger sport from the many influentials who nurse an inflated ego, a dollar sign addiction and an attitude which tends to put the rest of the world on a back burner.

But what does "like 25 most influential Americans" mean in our practical lives? Clearly, for some it means a consuming pursuit and imitation of the purveyor of influence. For most, in all likelihood, it means a sometime motivation with a noteworthy bearing salv on something like sports enter-tainment politics business, ru-ligion or, social life.

The most influential Americans? When all is said and done they are the people who move us when we least suspect we are being moved, who motivate us when we cannot get a handle on our motives, and who are mirrored in most we say and do. Thus, I find myself seeing my father as I mimic him in plant-ing flowers and shrubs, as well as in my love for the outdoors and all forms of founs and flore. Not coldidentally, my father was an attar perver path his last few days last few days.

Likewise, I see an ceris cione-like image of my no in my smile, grimaces, mass iom and agreement. America

.... Love, Patsy (Patsy Powell)

Good Morning Yall This is a long story that I am going to try to make short. I visited the local Bay Farmers Market and had gotten some turnips. I just love smothered turnips in brown gravy. Well, my mind said, you always fix that, be creative how about some turnips with pork ribs in brown gravy . . . that wasn't good enough for my mind either.

Out to the freezer I went to see what surprise I might find. Oysters! Fresh oysters are always better, but I always buy extra when they are plentiful and freeze in individual containers.

Who in their right mind would mix turnips and oysters? You guessed it, I did. You know

I like to experiment.

Well, the following recipe was published in the December 1994 issue of Southern Living magazine. Now ask me if I was proud of that! They happen to call my home about it when I had my grandkids over and we were making t-shirts that had patterns that had to be ironed

I was sweating, helping this one with paints, the other with brushes, trying to get these shirts done before they had to

My mind really didn't truly get excited as it should have as I was so busy, because my grand-kids are very special to me, and they think I'm arts and crafts Mawmaw, and you know what you guys, I am, and I love it. They think I can do anything with art . . . makes me feel extraspecially good. Everybody needs someone like that to help their self-esteem . . and I have them . . . I'm lucky. Aren't grandkids great! I know so.

See you next time . . . Love,

Murphy awarded scholarship

Hancock High School graduate Gleeson Murphy Jr. has been awarded the Emily de Monthuzin Foreign Language Scholarship for 1997 and will use it when he enters the honors program at Louisiana State University in the fall.

Murphy, son of Gleeson Murphy and Mrs. Julie Murphy, has had an exemplary high school record in many areas. He has especially excelled in his study of French and has been a volunteer teacher of French to elementary students at his

Committed by the LSU honors program to take at least 10 semester hours of a foreign language, he will begin with classes in Latin in preparation for a degree in veterinary zoology.

The scholarship, set up in 1983 when Emily de Montluzin retired from teaching foreign languages at Bay High School, for several years awarded $500 annually to an outstanding language students.

In 1990 the amount was increased to $1,000, and at a meeting in June of this year, the Board of Directors voted to raise the scholarship to $1.500. Murphy thus becomes the first recipient of the new amount.

Donations and memorial gifts to the scholarship fund are tax-exempt. It is because of such contributions that the fund continues to grow and that since 1983 13 outstanding students have received assistance in meeting constantly escalating college costs.

House goes flag to flag for win at Sun Coast

Thirteen of the Fuel Injected Sprints took to the quarter mile oval at Sun Coast Speedway in Pass Christian for a caution free feature. Heat winner Red Kunstbeck of Tampa, Fla., made things difficult on himself by jumping two attempted starts of the feature race. Kunstbeck was penalized by being sent to the rear of the field for the third attempt. Rusty House of Columbus bolted to the lead as the green flag dropped, followed by heat winner Harry Fergerson of Jackson and Steve Smith of Lafayette.

Although House was able to build a comfortable lead on his way to a flag-to-flag win, it was Kunstbeck creating the excitement as he worked his way through traffic.

The early going was relatively easy for Kunstbeck, but as he worked his way toward the front it became more difficult. By the time he reached fifth place finisher, Lance Hester of Gulfport took several laps of hard driving to work his way into second place. After he had gotten by Smith and Fergerson there were only a couple of lans remaining. House was in a comfortable spot, with a straight away lead, which was too much for Kunstbeck to overcome. Another local driver, Neal Gatlian, finished in the sixth position.

• Mark Pritchett and Noah Daspit headed the Street Stock feature as they took the green flag. Daspit moved to the front and remained there most of the race. Rodney Barber held third as they made a three-car breakaway from the field.

Barber was unable to improve his position as the three battled on their way to the checkers. Daspit made a slight slip allowing Pritchett to slip past for the lead and the win. This was Pritchett's first win of the season. Robert LaCoste and Barber both won heat races.

 Track record holder Chet Morrison made it look easy as, he claimed the lead from B. J. Reid as they came back to the flag stand on the first lap. While Morrison was moving out to a comfortable lead, Reid was battling to hold on to the second spot. Heat winner Jerry Winstead got into the rear of Reid's car spinning him in turn three. This brought out the black flag for Winstead ending his racing for the night.

Randy Eaton was the next one to get into Reid, ripping off the rear sheet metal of Reid's car Eaton was also sent to the pits while Reid was able to continue after having some loose parts removed from his car.

Bobby Helmer, making his first appearance since last year, was sporting a brand new #41 after demolishing the old one last season. Helmer finished in the third spot over Flubsy Triplett and Miguel Culasso. Billy Joe Schonewitz had no problem adding another Late Model Sportsman feature to his list. Although the field was light, Schonewitz blistered the dirt oval as usual on his way to the checkered flag in both heat and feature races. Jamie Luzenberg finished second in both races while Ray Holifield finished third in the feature.

· Donald Parker won both heat and feature races in the first IMCA-sanctioned race to be held at Sun Coast. Kalif Sellier chased Parker to the finish line while holding off Charlie Nevels and Vicky McSwain. This will be a regular class as the IMCA cars will replace the Four Cylinder Modifieds on a regular basis.

· Another change, in an effort to attract more cars in the Late Model Sportsman class, will be addition of Late Model race cars. With slight modifications, the Late Models will be eligible to compete in this

One compartment in Charlie Reed's tackle box is twice as large as the others. That's because the lures he puts in it are twice as big as normal lures.

"When the weather turns warm, I really like to fish big 10and 12-inch plastic worms instead of the normal four-, fiveand six-inch varieties," says Reed, winner of the 1986 Bass Masters Classic world championship and a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff.

"I'm not sure just what the bass must think an over-sized plastic worm represents, but they really hit it. It's especially effective for larger trophy-class

Reed fishes the big plastic worms several different ways, including rigged as a regular worm with a slip sinker, on a long leader as part of a Carolina rig, and without any weight as a surface lure.

"You don't have to rig a big plastic worm with a heavy sinker," said Reed. "In fact, sometimes a lighter sinker like 1/4 ounce is better. Big plastic worms sink pretty slowly and I believe that may be on of their attractions.

"I like to crawl it around heavy cover the same way I fish a shorter worm, and when you rig it weedless with the hook imbedded into the worm, you can throw it right into the cover. Other times, a slow hopping retrieve works better. It just depends on the mood of the bass."

The Johnson pro says there are some lakes, such as Santee Cooper in South Carolina, where large plastic worms seem to work better than shorter

"I believe Florida is where the oversized worms first gained notoriety because some manufacturers there were making worms over a foot long," remembers Reed. "From there, their popularity spread."

In many Florida lakes and in other states where lakes have heavy vegetation, Reed often fishes the big plastic worms as surface lures, crawling them through the greenery. "I use a 5/0 or 6/0 hook and rig it weedless," he explains. "Then I just swim it very slowly over the surface. This is one technique that often brings strikes from huge bass, and it works around other cover besides grass. Stumpfields, standing timber, and even brush piles are excellent places to fish a big worm this way."

When he's fishing a little deeper cover and structure, Reed may use big plastic worms on Carolina rigs.

One of the main reasons for using this technique is to give the bass something new and different to look at," he explains. "Many anglers fish points, sunken roadbeds, or channel breaks with plastic lizards and they do quite well. After a while, however, I think the fish may become accustomed to seeing those types of lures and be a little more reluctant to strike.

"That's when I put on one of these huge worms and usually start catching bass again."

To those who contend Maness and the other property owners will make money off a casino deal, he said that might be true, "But, I only own 40-feet fronting the beach, so how much could that be worth?."

He said his main reason for promoting the project is, "It will bring more jobs to Hancock County.'

Maness said he has potential developers who have looked at the property, but they were hesitant to put together any deal until the zoning was cleared up. Nonnie DeBardeleben, whose Concerned Citizens to Protect the Isle and the Point, was among the group's who filed the court challenge, told the audience she is opposed to any change in the Coastal Use Plan.

She said it was difficult to access the environmental impact of this present development because, "There is no project to evaluate.

Terese Cox, representing the Gulf Islands Conservacy, contended, "The state waterbottoms belong to the people."

She said there were alternate sites where a casino might locatge, but felt the beachfront in this particular area should be reserved for recreational purposes, such as swimming and

Joe Cure, representing Bayou Caddy Fisheries, supported the project. He said it would be good for the county's future, and would provide additional revenue for schools.

Businessman Ken Sellier contended casinos can exist, along with fishing and recreation, as they have in Harrison County. He also complained that most of the opposition to the present project was coming from groups located in Harrison

The DMR is expected to rule on the rezoning petition at its Aug. 19 meeting.

In addition to support from county agencies and influential individuals, Maness told the Echo he has given out over 1,000 mailers and asked supporters to send them in to the DMR staff.

Should the CPI be reduced?

(Editor's note: Second of a two-part series on Social Security)

Last week we covered one of the commonly discussed recommendations for preserving the long-term health of the Social Security system: raising the retirement age.

Another proposal is to change the way the Consumer Price Index (CPI) is calculated. The CPI reflects changes in the cost of living for Americans - in other words, the inflation rate. It is used, among other things, to determine cost of living adjustments (COLAs) for Social Security benefit checks each year. As the CPI goes up, so do Social Security benefits. In 1997, benefits increased 2.9 percent.

COLAs were not a part of the original Social Security plan. They were implemented in 1972 and have had a significant impact on Social Security's long-term health. Social Security recipients have seen their benefits double between 1978 and 1996. Not only are retirees living longer, but they also are now receiving increasing payments — two factors that the original system was not designed to sup-

The argument for changing how the CPI is calculated hinges on the fact that it is always based on a "market basket" containing the same products and brand names. The goods and services in that market basket remain constant over time; however, consumers purchase different brands based on available prices.

For example, assume the CPI includes a 2-liter bottle of Coca-Cola and a Compaq personal computer. The prices on these items went up this year, adding to the increase in the CPI. However, many consumers instead may have bought Pepsi or a comparable Gateway computer, whose prices did not go up last year. So the argument is: Why should retirees get an increase in Social Security when their cost of living may not have gone up?

Those who oppose reducing the CPI have a different argument. They say that the above example is true; however, retirees aren't buying soft drinks and computers. They're paying for prescriptions, hospital visits and golf - all of which are increasing in price much faster than the average market basket of goods.

So, what is the right thing to do?

Keep in mind the purpose of these discussions: to find a way to prevent Social Security from going bankrupt in 2030. The probable solution is that everyone will be asked to give a little. Retirees will likely be asked to help by accepting smaller COLAs and paying income taxes on more of their benefits. Workers will likely be asked to pay a little more and work a few more years before retiring.

Everyone will probably be asked to pitch in, but when all is said and done, Americans will continue to enjoy the very

BellSouth seeks PSC long distance approval

BellSouth has formally ask the Mississippi Public Service Commission (MPSC) to start the approval process to allow it to fully compete in the long distance market in state.

The Telecommunications Act of 1996 ordered each state's local telephone markets opened to competition from long distance companies and other competitors. Once the local market is deemed open, BellSouth can enter the long distance business BellSouth's markets can be proved "open" either through competitors offering business and residential local telephone service through their own facilities, or by BellSouth making general terms and conditions available so that any competi-tor wishing to enter the market can do so quickly. Competitors can then obtain the types of services they require from Bell-South in order to offer local service to customers.

BellSouth's filing with the MPSC shows that the local telecommunications market in Mississippi is fully open to competition, because the company has met the 14-point federal checklist of terms and conditions specified for the Bell companies by Congress in the Telecommunications Act of 1996. Bell-South's filing demonstrates that it is in the public interest to allow it to compete in the long distance market.

In its filing at the MPSC, BellSouth submitted a statement of terms and conditions for competitive interconnection and access to the local telephone network. As intended by Congress, these terms and conditions will be available to any best lifestyles and have the ditions will be available to any competitor certified by the Mississippi PSC without the name of any flation on earth. sissippi PSC without it is named sity of a potentially lengthy negotiation and arbitration and often simply rock from side to side repeating the motion they had done for so long while standing in their cribs, holding onto the side railing.

Some children are brought in after being drugged with sedatives and depressants in an effort to keep them quiet.

Latham said many of the older children have been tortured for years and in addition to the physical wounds, the psychological abuse is appalling. "It's very hard for these kids to trust adults," he explained.

"These are not well behaved kids in (the normal sense). They have a lot of anger and a lot of emotional (problems),"

What Hope Haven provides is a safe place to live until other plans can be made.

When children arrive, they are brought for any emergency medical treatment necessary. During the school year, they at-tend school and also may attend religious services when a religious preference is indicated.

During the summer, Hope Haven has a summer program which may include swimming, day camp, bowling and arts and

"They have a pretty fun time while being in the shelter, and that is rare," said Latham.

During a child's time in Hope Haven, DHS works on finding a solution to the problem.

The goal of DHS is to reunite the family whenever possible, according to Latham.

That may mean family counseling or drug and alcohol rehabilitation.

"Whatever it takes to fix the adults in the family (is done)," Latham explains. "If the kids can be safely returned home, (DHS) tries to reunite the family.

If reuniting the family is not possible, an attempt is made to place the child with another appropriate family member. If that fails, the child may then go into a foster home.

Unlike many shelters, Hope Haven will keep children longer than 45 days while a solution is being sought.

"My Board has told me I will keep kids until DHS makes the best move possible," Latham explained. "I keep them as long as I can while DHS is working."

The shelter can house up to nine children, and Latham said he has to turn kids away every other day. Generally kids are turned away because there is not adequate or appropriate space, because priority must be given to Hancock County children or because the child has been in the "system" for a long time and doesn't meet the requirements for emergency shelter.

Latham explained Hope Haven is a non-therapeutic shelter which means it does not provide therapy, which is left to other professionals working with the child.

The shelter staff provide love and a feeling of safety for the kids while they are there.

"We have kids afraid to go to bed at night," Latham said. "(They've) had monsters sneak into their room at night for a long time."

At present, Hope Haven has about 14 full and part time employees, and the cost of state required personnel accounts for a large portion of the shelter's $210,000 annual budget.

As stated in its fund raising brochure, it costs $600 per day to run Hope Haven which charges the county $20 a day to feed and house a child.

Last year Hope Haven re-ceived about 12 percent of its funding from the county and cities and less than five percent membership. contributions.

This year Latham said he needs to receive a large percentage of the necessary funding from local municipalities if Hope Haven is to remain open, especially given that some of the first year's funding is not available.

While there are people and organizations willing to help, Latham said, they will not help if the local municipalities do not come through.

He said he believes Hope Haven is an ideal marriage between public and private. With child abuse on the rise nationally as well as locally, Latham believes it is a public duty to provide care for these kids.

Hancock County is the only county in Mississippi with over 20,000 people which does not have a county-run and financed shelter.

Prior to the opening of Hope Haven, children were sent wherever there was a shelter bed open which sometimes meant as far away as Memphis. Besides costing additional mo-ney, the move kept the children away from their social workers and away from any appropriate family members.

The kids were taken away from everything they knew, and they had not done anything wrong, said Latham

With a successful fundraising drive, the shelter will remain open to provide for those children in need of safety and caring.

"(We can't) let the system abuse these kids a second time,' said Latham. "This local shelter is the best way to take care of the need of these kids in this county."

The membership drive is aimed at 500 members, at all levels, with a long term goal of 2000. Public service ads will begin running on local television and radio and in newspapers. The brochures and PSAs were done free of charge by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Ad Federation.

Latham said he receives many inquiries about donations of clothing and toys. In order to best utilize the donations, he has arranged with Goodwill to get a store credit for each item donated to Goodwill in the name of Hope Haven. In that way Latham can get exactly what he needs at the time.

Two items which he is always in need of are suitcases and children's school knapsacks.

The kids in the shelter are used to not having the name brand clothing, explained Latham, but it's hard to see everyone else with a knapsack.

As for the suitcases, Latham said many of the kids show up at the shelter clutching a garbage bag filled with their few belongings.

"I will not send those kids out with a garbage bag," he said. For more information on Hope Haven call (601)467-7945.

Local residents receive NASA honor awards

Seven Gulf Coast residents were among 29 people recognized recently during NASA's Honor Awards Ceremony held at John C. Stennis Space Center (SSC).

NASA's Doug McLaughlin, of Pass Christian, received the NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal, and Ronald Magee, of Bay St. Louis, received the NASA Exceptional Service Medal.

NASA's Nancy Sullivan and Johnson Controls World Services' Deborah Jackson, both of Pass Christian, are members of the Stennis Education Program Team that received the NASA Group Achievement Award.

The Technical Services Division Test Support Group at Stennis received NASA's Public Service Group Achievement Award. Team members from Bay St. Louis are Louis Arceneaux and Vance Hathcock, both with Johnson Controls World Services.

NASA's prestigious Honor Awards are presented to a number of carefully selected individuals and groups, both government and nongovernment, who make outstanding contributions to the NASA mission.

In his address, Stennis Space Center Director Roy Estess said, "These individuals and our teams have made substantial contributions to NASA and Stennis Space Center. It is a pleasure and an honor to be associated with you in a personal way."

NASA's Steve Oswald was the guest speaker at the awards ceremony. Oswald is the director of Space Shuttle Requirements for the Office of Space Flight at NASA Headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Prior to presenting medals and certificates to the awards recipients, Oswald said, "It's good to be back, and it gives me the opportunity to thank you personally on behalf of myself and my family for those nine engines you tested here that got me to orbit three times. You all are to be congratulated on the work you've been doing here. You're a great team, and special congratulations to those award winners here today."

NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal - McLaughlin, deputy director of NASA's Center Operations and Support Directorate, was cited for using his vast knowledge to lead and challenge employees in reducing the cost of operations at the center while maintaining or improving service and responsiveness. He has also served as an integral part of the NASA Zero Base Review and as center representative for the Office of Space Flight Infrastructure Review at NASA Headquarters.

The NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal is awarded for notably outstanding leadership that has had a pronounced effect upon the technical or administrative programs of NASA. The leadership award may be given for an act of leadership or sustained contributions based on an individual's effectiveness as a leader, the productivity of the individual's programs, or the demonstrated ability to develop the administrative or technical talents of other employees.

NASA Exceptional Service Medal - Magee, NASA Environmental Officer at Stennis, received the medal for his management and organizational skills in developing a five-year master schedule environmental and industrial hygiene activities. He also assured that all environmental funding activities at Stennis were coordinated with NASA Headquarters providing an excellent funding profile for present and future environmental needs at SSC. Among other accomplishments, Magee was instrumental in assuring reports submitted to the Environmental Protection Agency matched with current funding allocations and future approved levels.

The NASA Exceptional Service Medal is awarded for significant, sustained performance characterized by unusual initiative or creative ability that clearly demonstrates substantial improvements or contributions in engineering, aeronautics, space flight, administration, support or space-related endeavors that contribute to NASA's mission.

NASA Group Achievement Award - The Group Achievement Award recognizes outstanding accomplishment made through the coordination of many individual efforts and has contributed substantially to the accomplishment of the NASA mission. This award may be used to recognize the accomplishments of either a total government employee group or as a team award to a group comprised of both government and non-government personnel.

The SSC Education Program Team was honored for its support of NASA's Strategic Plan for. Education over the past several years, becoming a recognized leader in exercising NASA's educational goals. Among numerous accomplishments, the Education Program has fully implemented two cutting-edge professional development training program centers for educators and students—the TREND 2000 Center and the Fibernet 2000 Classroom. The program also received Vice President Al Gore's "Hammer Award" for its collaborative work with the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians in establishing a Regional Teacher Resource Center on the reservation, the first for a NASA center.

NASA Public Service Group Achievement Award - The NASA Public Service Group Achievement Award is given to a non-government group in recognition of outstanding accomplishment which has contributed substantially to the NASA mission.

SSC's Technical Services Division Test Support Group received recognition for its rapid response engineering and maintenance coordination to the Space Shuttle Main Engine complex. The team completed many accomplishments, which included taking on an additional $1.5 million in projects at mid-year above the $1.2 million already scheduled for fiscal year 1996. By establishing a priority for completing the projects, the team completed 95 of the 101 total projects by the end of the year. As a result of the dedicated effort of this group, coordinated maintenance in the test complex is extremely high, and no test firings have been delayed as a result of poor maintenance or slow response.

Koch named scafood festival poster winner

Janie Koch of Pass Christian is the winning artist in the Biloxi Seafood Festival Poster Contest, sponsored by the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce. The winning entry was announced July 11 at the George E. Ohr Cultural Arts Center in Biloxi.

Koch's work gives a porthole view of the history and heritage of the seafood industry in the natural hues of the Gulf Coast. A blue crab and a shrimp look into the porthole to catch a glimpse of our culture — Koch's depiction of shrimp nickels the monetary unit of cannery workers, shipping containers, oyster tongs, the Biloxi Lighthouse, the Blessing of the Fleet and a schooner, bearing the name of Jimmy Ellis, a local netmaker.

"The festival committee reviewed numerous entries for the 1997 poster and decided to use the artwork of Janie Koch, said Rickey Mattiace, 1997 Biloxi Seafood Festival chairman.

Bay-Waveland Area Elks Lodge praised at national convention

No truth to the rumor that the Windy City got its nickname during an Elks convention, but the more than 10,000 members who gathered here July 5-10 for the 133rd National Convention of the BPO Elks of the USA did have plenty to gust about. Last year, the total value of the Elks' philanthropic works was $133 million. These works include youth athletic and drug education programs, aid for people with disabilities, college scholarships, cancer and transplantation research, and veter-

A highlight of the convention was the session when Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, addressed the conventioneers, whose numbers included a delegation from Bay-Waveland Area Elks Lodge 2776.

Also speaking were the over-all winners of the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest, Leon Lopez, 9, of Santa Fe, N.M. and Amber Langeton, 12, of Tampa, Fla. More than three million kids from 8 to 13 participated in this year's program.

They were followed by Stephanie Lynn Murg, 18, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Martin D. Wong, 17, of Fremont, Calif., the top two winners in the Elks National Foundation's "Most Valuable Student" scholarship contest. Each will receive a four-year, $20,000 scholarship. The Foundation annually awards $2.1 million college scholarships based on academics, leadership and need.

Throughout the convention, the 2,200 local lodges were hailed for their support of the order's national programs, as well as their own local programs.

Our goal this year is to continue strengthening America," declared Carlon O'Malley of Scranton, Penn., who was elected national leader of the Elks during the convention, "and the members of our local lodges, led by the Exalted Rulers, will be our bricks and our mortar."

The Exalted Ruler, or lodge president, of Bay-Waveland Area Elks Lodge is Gene Wood-

rick of Bay St. Louis. The BPO Elks of the USA is headquartered at 2750 N. Lakeview Ave., Chicago, IL 60614-1889, 773-477-2750, http://www.elks.org. There are about 1.3 million members nationwide.

GOD'S APPROVALE

Every day, we are faced with the choice of pleasing man or pleasing God, and sometimes the decision is no subtle that we may not be too certain of how we should react. For example, we may be purchasing something, and the cashier undercharges us. Do we correct the cashier or do we say nothing? Or, someone may tell an offensive story in our presence and we may unknowingly give our approval by simply laughing or repeating the story. The Bible tells us that we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God, and whenever we do omething to someone that we wouldn't want done to us we are breeking God's Golden Rule. Life is not always easy, and sometimes the decision to please God can be a very difficult one; however, choosing to live each day as God would want us to is a wonderful way to receive God's approval and to witness to others that we love the Lord.

> ...What I want is God's approval! Am I trying to be popular with men? If I were still trying to do so, I would not be a servent of Christ. Good Nevis Bible Galatiens 1:10
